

Play Scripts Reveal Fine 'Hidden' Writing

Shaw Master at Detailed Character
Descriptions Penned for Producer

BY JINGO

Some of the best writing in dramatic literature is seen only by a handful of people and most often reaches the stage distorted or by chance.

This hidden writing is composed of the directions and descriptions the author affords his future producers.

To Jingo, George Bernard Shaw was the master in these hidden writings. So engrossed was Shaw in the character of "My Fair Lady" that he wrote a substantial essay — a short novel — on what happened after the curtain came down on Pygmalion. That's real hidden writing.

His description of the discovery of Cleopatra for his "Caesar and Cleopatra" is a good example of his masterful directions.

"The light still clears, until the upraised eyes of the image are distinguished looking straight forward and upward in infinite fearless vigil, and a mass of colorless, and a mass of colorless, between its great paws define itself as a heap of red poppies on which a girl lies motionless, her silken vest heaving gently and regularly with the breathing of a dreamless sleeper, and her braided hair glittering in a shaft of moonlight like a bird's wing."

Description of Liza
After Freddy smashes into the flower girl in Pygmalion, Shaw sets down the following description of Liza:

"She is not at all an attractive person. She is perhaps 18, perhaps 20, hardly older. She wears a little sailor hat of black straw

Your Problems

Comedy Situation for Mother Is Real Tragedy for Daughter

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 17-year-old girl who will never be able to understand mothers. Maybe you can help. Several girl friends feel just as I do. We would like to know if it is us or our mothers who are at fault.

Mothers are always complaining because their daughters don't confide in them. They feel hurt when we take our troubles to "an outsider." They claim they want to be close to us, but what happens when we try to confide? We are laughed at.

I was having trouble with my boy friend last week and decided to talk to my mother. I tried to explain the problem as best I could. She seemed very amused. Then in the middle of my story she began to laugh. She called me a silly kid and said I sounded like a nine-year-old. I was so crushed I began to cry and ran to my room.

I will never go to my mother for advice again. I wouldn't take a chance of getting my feelings hurt this way. Please print my letter in the paper, Ann. Maybe it will help other mothers understand why their daughters don't confide in them.—Sharon

Dear Sharon: I sympathize with you and agree that your mother muffed a good opportunity to provide moral support at a time when you needed it.

Circus Life Showcased In Special

BY TV SCOUT
7:30-8:30 (Channel 2 — Golden Showcase has a fascinating story in "Tonight in Samarkand," a short-lived Broadway play of 1954. It is a mystery-fantasy, although even that hardly describes its exotic mood. The background is a European circus, and the chief figures are James Mason, as the magician who dabbles in illegal fortune-telling; Janice Rule, the dare-devil lion tamer who is loved by three men; Martin Gabel, the police inspector who follows Mason; Betsy Von Furstenberg, the mysterious girl who pops in and out, and assorted suitors, assistants and circus performers. The problem is that Miss Rule cannot decide which of three men to marry. This is a live show, but there is a taped insert for the lion-taming scenes. Evelyn Curry, a Ringling Bros. circus lion-tamer, doubles for Miss Rule in these, in a sequence taped between circus shows in Trenton.

6:30-7:30 (Channel 2 — Perry Mason has one of his typical stories, a murder complicated by blackmail, love, jealousy, hate, financial shenanigans and, this time, even the administration of radioactive poisons. Some good people are involved here—Paul Richards is the prime suspect in the murder of his wife, Mary. Blanchard, who had many enemies; William Schallert, Jeff Donnel and Ann Rutherford (who plays the whole show in a wheel chair) are other possibilities.

10-Year Study in Detroit

Sociologist Finds Protestants Tend to Ignore Sick, Needy, Poor

BY JULES LOM

NEW YORK (AP) — "Are the Protestant churches today more concerned with the healthy, the wealthy and the successful than with the sick, the poor and the needy?"

A University of Michigan sociologist asked himself this question after a 10-year study of the religious and social attitudes of Americans.

His research seems to indicate, he says, that the answer is yes. Dr. Gerhard Lenski Jr., son of a Lutheran clergyman and grandson of a theology professor, focused on members of his own church in a two-part article which appears this week and next in "The Lutheran," a journal of the United Lutheran Church in America.

'True Cross Section'
Lenski last year wrote a book titled "The Religious Factor," in which he assayed the extent to which religion influences Protestants, Catholics and Jews in nearly every area from political affiliation to installment buying. He based his conclusions on a scientifically selected group in the Detroit area which, he said, represented a true cross section of the nation.

The author cautioned in a preface to the book that his findings likely would be "disturbing to men of every faith."

The same could be said of his current article which projects Lutheranism against the background of the larger work. He discovered, for example, that:

Nearly one-third of the Lutherans questioned seldom, if ever, attend church; and another 15 percent attend only once a month.

Forty per cent never read the Bible and only 10 per cent read it frequently or every day.

Churchgoing Lutherans were as unfamiliar with Biblical characters as those who stay home. Forty per cent of both categories couldn't identify Peter. "A sad commentary," said Lenski, "on either the content or techniques of present-day Lutheran preaching."

But Lenski said the churchgoing habits of Lutherans compared favorably with other Protestant denominations. Lutherans, he said, "are less likely to attend every Sunday, but they also are less likely never to attend at all." He also said that Protestant churches in general, including the Lutheran church, "have a much stronger appeal to the more prosperous and successful members of the community than to members sickness and death, are linked with increased church attendance."

This was reflected in his findings. There were, however, some strongly Republican and those who stay at home tend to be Democrats. This in turn, he said, suggests Protestant churches tend to "unwittingly alienate most Protestant men; converts to those who do not share the dominant Republican commitment and numerous as those who reported abandoning the Lutheran church outlook."

Moreover, said Lenski, "there for some other, and Lutherans are some evidence suggesting that there is a good deal more to contemporary Protestantism has erant than others regarding race.

little to offer those in distress."

He said he discovered that "those who feel they have experienced unusual difficulties with respect to sickness, death, or churches show a marked drop in church attendance. This contrasts with the Catholic pattern where the finances of crises, at least those related to the community than to members sickness and death, are linked with increased church attendance."

There were, however, some bright spots for Lutherans in Lenski's report.

Lutheran men, for example, attend church more regularly than women. Lutheranism are nearly twice as numerous as those who reported abandoning the Lutheran church outlook.

Fifth Amendment Upheld Again

We have all heard complaints that the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution has been used by persons to evade questions concerning their loyalties to the United States. But there is another facet to the famed amendment which we too seldom hear about but which is basic to the application of justice for all citizens. The U. S. Supreme Court made this clear in a recent decision.

The court had before it an appeal from a Massachusetts company and two of its employees who had been charged with falsification of facts on tests of electronic devices made for the Army. The appeal by the Department of Justice was based on what it claimed was a bad error by a Boston federal judge in ordering an acquittal of the defendants after the government had presented only preliminary witnesses and before it had begun to present the substance of its case.

The government, understandably on the basis of its feeling that the trial judge erred in ordering acquittal before it could present its full case, wanted the defendants to stand trial again on the same charges. The Supreme Court in a 7 to 1 decision, turned down the appeal and cited the guaranty of the Fifth Amendment that no person shall "be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb." The court continued in its opinion:

"That constitutional provision is the very root of the present case, and we cannot but conclude that the guaranty was violated when the court of appeals set aside the judgment of acquittal and directed that the petitioners, the company and the two employees, be tried again for the same offense."

Thus, the court upheld the general principle embodied in the Fifth Amendment on double jeopardy even though it, privately, may have taken a dim view of the trial judge's action. The courts are run by human beings who are subject to error, sometimes error which may, in fact, subvert justice in a particular case. Such errors, however, must not be permitted to erode the general principles of constitutional law which are designed for the overall protection of the nation's citizens. This it seems to us is the point which the Supreme Court made precise in its decision.

RS 70 Bomber Program

The RS 70 Bomber program will be carried on in the future as President Kennedy and Sec. of Defense McNamara direct. Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Georgia, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, abandoned his fight to "direct" McNamara to spend $320 million more on the RS 70 program than the $180 million McNamara had requested. The resolution was changed to "authorize" the spending after President Kennedy entered the argument with a letter in which he assured Rep. Vinson that the matter would be re-studied.

The Kennedy letter stated that the President had "fondest respect" for Vinson and added that it is "incumbent upon the executive to give every possible consideration in such matters to the views of Congress." He added, however, that "I must insist on the full powers and discretion of my office."

This battle, which had been raging between Rep. Vinson and Sec. McNamara for days, thus is settled by compromise. Rep. Vinson had been talking about the constitutional authority of Congress "to raise and support armies" and had promised a "flatfooted fight" for his resolution and wisely yielded to the spirit of compromise.

The question here is whether or not one branch of the government, in this case the legislative branch, might be able to force its will upon another branch, in this instance the executive branch. The question is much the same as that raised when courts are called upon to require legislative bodies to reapportion their legislative districts. The great difference is that in the reapportionment matter the legislatures are clearly defining a constitutional mandate which says it is their duty to reapportion after each federal census. So far no courts have attempted to enforce such an order even though it is included as a constitutional provision.

In the present case, Rep. Vinson was well aware that he could not compel the Defense Department to spend money even though it was appropriated. Every year since 1947, Congress has voted the Defense Department more than that department has asked. This money was not always spent. In 1949, the Truman administration recommended that the Air Force be continued on a 48-combat-group level. The House voted $740 million more than had been asked for a 58-group force. The money was impounded and not spent. President Truman, in 1950, cancelled the first Forrestal carrier contrary to the wishes of Congress. In 1956, Congress added some $600 million to the budget estimate for the Polaris program but only about half of the increase was spent in the following year.

Rep. Vinson is in a position of authority in Congress and wields great power and influence. Thus his support will be needed by the administration on many occasions in the future. With that in mind it seemed safe to predict the compromise. However, it is a good thing for this country that we have men in both the administrative and legislative posts willing to compromise and get on with the business of the day rather than holding up affairs of the nation to determine a matter of prestige.

Wisconsin and Capital Punishment

Capital punishment still appears to be a debatable matter even in Wisconsin where it was abolished in 1853. Over and over again it has been shown that the severity of the punishment has little to do with deterring crime. Prompt detection of crime and firm application of the law tends to deter crime. But there is evidence that the more severe the punishment the more difficult it is to convict and thus severe punishment such as capital punishment often tends to defeat the very purpose of the law.

Recently a Burlington couple began circulation of a petition asking that the supreme punishment be restored in Wisconsin. They were astounded to learn how many people do not believe in capital punishment. Nevertheless, since they were seeking only 800 signers, they unquestionably will complete the petition. They began their task shortly after the slaying of Sgt. Anthony Eilers of the Burlington Police Department. A Racine man and a youth, unnamed because he is under 18 years of age, are being held in connection with the slaying. The circulators of the petition were amazed to learn that Mrs. Eilers, the wife of the slain sergeant, does not believe in capital punishment.

The question of abolishing capital punishment recently came up for consideration in the Mississippi legislature. The bill was sponsored by the Mississippi state bar and the state district attorneys' association. They claim juries often refuse to convict because of extenuating circumstances which they feel do not merit extreme punishment. On the recommendation of these organizations, the legislature voted to endorse the measure. Immediately a storm broke out in the legislature and very shortly the assembly reversed itself and voted 72 to 46 against the bill. The action came after an emotional appeal by a woman member of the Assembly who denounced the measure as letting "the bars down to rapists who would ravish our women and girls."

Thus the state of Mississippi has retained capital punishment against the advice of experts who must apply the law and know that it is not only impractical but sometimes damaging to the cause of law enforcement and crime prevention. In Wisconsin, the circulators of the petition already have learned that sentiment is strongly against the adoption of capital punishment and it certainly is to be hoped that Wisconsin district attorneys and other law enforcement officials will not be burdened with this ancient rule which may satisfy some people's desire for vengeance but is in fact not a recognized help in law enforcement or crime prevention.

Time to Repair Roof Is When Sun Is Shining, Says Kennedy

From The Detroit Free Press

Every taxpayer in the nation can understand the homey simile President Kennedy used in asking Congress for a new anti-recession weapon.

"The time to repair the roof is when the sun is shining," he said, and he also made mention of the fact that it's a good thing to have something for a rainy day besides a leaky roof.

The President wants authority to pump up to $2 billion into public works programs whenever the unemployment level rises by clearly defined rates that indicate a recession is starting. He feels that the money, going into make-work programs could cut off the recession.

In this we agree completely. You might even say that jobs cut unemployment. This is good.

What we don't understand is where the money is coming from for the rainy day, or when the new roof gets paid for.

The way we always understood the rainy day phrase was that you saved a little money and stuck it in the bank or the mattress, and hauled it out when times were tough.

But Kennedy made no provision for putting anything aside. What he wants is the authority to spend it, without the necessity of saving it first.

In short, he wants more credit. He wants the authority to overspend the budget by as much as $2 billion, and increase the national debt by a like amount.

Considering that the debt is already $300 billion, that the sun is shining on America's economy and this is the time to save rather than overspend, the sensible Congressional answer would be No, or a qualified Yes.

President Kennedy should have an okay to spend the money if he'll see that it's tucked away first.

A Background Report

Aid to Education Bill Faces Problems

BY JOHN BECKLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Kennedy entered the White House last year, the prospects were strong that for the first time in history Congress would pass a bill providing financial aid for public schools.

Now even the most ardent supporters of such legislation fear it may be years before it

Through the years, advocates of federal aid to education in Congress have fought many a dogged skirmish — and have usually lost. Once again, political observers say the prospect for legislation is near zero. Here's an informative report on the whys and wherefores of this prolonged offensive with few victories.

can even seriously be considered in Congress again. Some are convinced it will never pass.

Such an abrupt and startling reversal in the fortunes of a measure that many consider vitally necessary has been widely interpreted as a major defeat for Kennedy.

But a study of the issues involved and the harrowing history of the legislation shows that only the most determined and persistent use of his full powers as President might have altered the outcome.

Kennedy used nothing approaching such pressure.

The fact is that bills to aid the public schools have been going down to defeat in Congress for 90 years. No President has ever made the kind of fight it would require to change the result.

Three Major Issues

From the first defeat in 1870 to last year's setback in the House Rules Committee, school bills have become entangled in three major issues, which, though varying in intensity from time to time, have remained basically unchanged. They are race, religion and federal control of education.

Up until World War II the question of federal control was probably the most effective in preventing passage of any public school bill and it is still the traditional ground of opposition among conservatives.

The ground became a bit less solid in 1913 when Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, the Republican Party's leading conservative, co-sponsored a major school bill, helped steer it through the Senate and, when the House failed to act, did it again in 1919.

The issue was further weakened by the enactment in 1950 of a bill authorizing payments to local school districts near federal property on which school children live, or their parents work. Under this "impacted areas" program nearly $2 billion has gone to build public schools and to pay teachers in one-third of the nation's school districts without much complaint of federal control.

Charge Discrimination

As that issue faded, however, the others flared brighter. Taft's 1940 bill was amended in the House Education and Labor Committee to prohibit the use of any federal funds for transportation, text books or other such services to private schools, although several states permitted such payments.

The committee's action brought a strongly worded complaint from Francis Cardinal Spellman that the bill discriminated against parochial schools.

The same issue resulted in a bitter fight within the committee. Finally, those who felt the bill was discriminatory killed the measure by a vote of 13-12. Kennedy, then a freshman member, voted with the majority. So did another new member, Richard M. Nixon.

Taft's example had pretty well established Senate support for federal school aid and from then on all the major battles have been in the House.

Powell Amendment

By 1956 when the next big push was mounted, the Supreme Court's antisegregation decision had inflamed the racial issue.

In a wild session that saw the chairman of the Education and Labor Committee throw up his hands and stalk off the floor in the middle of debate, the House adopted an amendment by Rep. Adam C. Powell, D-N. Y., to deny funds to segregated schools. Republicans, who had voted solidly to put the Powell Amendment in, then joined with Southern Democrats and defeated the bill.

The battle was renewed the next year, and after another riotous debate in which the Powell Amendment was adopted and the bill brought to the brink of defeat, the Democratic leadership accepted a suddenly offered Republican substitute. It was a bill President Eisenhower had endorsed in 1956 and when the Democrats agreed to go along, passage seemed assured.

But before a vote could be taken on the substitute, Rep. Howard W. Smith, D-Va., chairman of the Rules Committee and leader of the Southern conservatives, uttered a privileged motion that would have the effect of killing the original bill. On such a vote the issues were obscured and Republicans, who would have been embarrassed to vote against the Eisenhower bill, voted with Smith. The motion carried, 203-203, and there was nothing left to which a substitute could be offered.

Block Biggest Bill

A 15-15 tie vote in the Education and Labor Committee kept any school bill from coming to the floor in 1958, and in 1959 the Rules Committee blocked the biggest school bill yet proposed, a $400 million-a-year measure that had already passed the Senate. The House then scaled its bill down to $225 million a year and speeded it through the Rules Committee in the 1960 session.

That summer, for the first time, the House passed a school bill, but the rejoicing of its sponsors was short-lived. The vast difference between the House and Senate bills required a joint conference to work out a compromise and the Rules Committee — the Powell Amendment again having been added — refused to send the House bill to conference. Both bills died with the expiration of the session.

Despite this history, prospects were bright for a school bill early last year as a result of two beliefs, that Kennedy would provide the needed leadership, and that the Rules Committee's roadblock role had been ended by the addition of two administration Democrats after a celebrated battle.

Neither belief was borne out. Before Kennedy was inaugurated, he appointed a task force which recommended federal school aid, excluding parochial schools on grounds such aid would be unconstitutional. In his school aid message to Congress later, Kennedy again pointedly excluded parochial schools on constitutional grounds.

Meanwhile the Catholic Church was campaigning to have parochial schools included in any new bill.

There has been much puzzlement expressed, even indirectly by Kennedy, that the church should lay such a heavy burden on the first Catholic president. But the basic reason was simple. This was the first time parochial schools had been excluded specifically for constitutional reasons — with which the Catholic hierarchy obviously did not agree.

Compromise Tried

The Education and Labor Committee tried to compromise on the issue last year, leaving parochial schools out of Kennedy's school bill but putting them in another measure which would permit parochial schools to make long-term, low-interest loans for non-religious purposes.

However, like in 1949, a House Committee—the time the Rules Committee—killed the bill by a one-vote margin.

Kennedy continues to call for a public school bill but there is no indication the House hears him and little likelihood it will act on its own. The religious issue, if anything, has intensified of late.

Cardinal Spellman is taking an even firmer stand in favor of federal aid to parochial schools. And many Catholic members of Congress are now anxious to avoid being put on the spot by having to vote.

The most hopeful supporters of a school bill are now looking to the elections this fall and in 1964 to change the atmosphere, but such optimists are few.

More share the view of Rep. Powell, now chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, who said recently in a discussion of federal aid to education:

"I believe it is hopeless for a long time to come, regardless of which party is in power."

"Through the years a majority of members of the House have publicly stated they are in favor of it. But privately the majority is not."

What worries us most about these national testing programs, however, is the impact they are inevitably having on the curricula of the high schools. The schools increasingly tend to teach instruction, not for the individual needs of the students, but so that as many of them as possible will score high marks on the tests.

So we join the school administrators in urging a thorough reappraisal of the entire testing system. Our high schools on the whole have nothing to gain from a test-imposed standardization. And they have a great deal to lose.

As the committee claims, testing is getting out of hand.

Frequent Argument

One argument often advanced for the standardized tests is that they substitute mathematical accuracy for often fallible human judgment in assessing a student's capabilities. They are fair, this contention runs, absolutely fair. But are they? There are many pupils, the report says, "who do not fit into the test pattern." These include "the test-shy, the emotionally disturbed, the unmotivated, the late-bloomers and the culturally deprived."

"It is impossible," the committee says, "to translate human traits and potentialities into a meaningful numerical score."

Need Little More Confidence

Standardized National Tests Hurt Individual High School Students

From Wall Street Journal

Back in the days when we were considering college, our problems were few. Our high school record was a bit above average and the college of our choice was willing, even eager, to accept us without any falderal. Our only big problem was money.

Now all this has changed. There are scholarships galore, and most colleges have more applicants than they can handle. The number of would-be students at some schools is many times the number that can be accommodated. In the difficult process of selection, the colleges have come to rely increasingly on the results of tests prepared by national organizations and administered to high school students.

So the national tests have eased the problems of college admissions officials. But in the process they have created many new problems for the youth of the nation, and also for the high schools. Some of these new difficulties were underlined the other day by a report prepared by three national educational organizations, the American Association of School Administrators, the Council of Chief State School Officers and the National Association of Secondary School Administrators.

The report calls attention to the proliferation of these national tests. There are, the educators found, more than 20 national testing programs. Dr. David Austin, a professor at Columbia Teachers College and chairman of the committee that prepared the report, says that the National Merit Scholarship tests alone were administered to more than 200,000 high school students last year.

"Is it reasonable," the committee asks, "that a test should be taken by 800,000 pupils, consuming the equivalent of 40,000 pupil school days to determine 10,000 finalists who will compete to determine 1,000 winners?"

With many high schools administering more than one test, high school students are spending increased portions of their junior and senior years merely preparing for and taking such tests.

Republican Tax Policy Praised

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Motor for March 20, 1882.

The people will be gratified to learn that the next tax for the ordinary expenses of the State will be the lightest by far ever levied.

When, by the judicious re-trenchments inaugurated by the Republicans upon their accession to power in this State, it was brought from $350,000 per annum down to $150,000, the opposition alleged the figures were designed to deceive. They declared it was a simple trick to mislead the people, that the State Government could not be carried on without a heavier direct tax, and it would lead to a deficit in the treasury.

Time, however, has vindicated it and branded the slanderers in the opposition party. With that amount of State tax, the public buildings and charities of the State have been carried forward and supported. No deficit has occurred in the treasury.

On the contrary, the liabilities of the State have for the first time in its history been promptly met and paid, a surplus left in the treasury.

The hospital for the insane, the institute for the blind, deaf and dumb, the State reform school and the State prison have been erected, all except the latter since the period when marked reduction of taxes began. The new Capitol has been so far completed as to answer the requirements of the public for some years.

Amelia Earhart's around-the-world flight was delayed as her plane skidded and crashed while she was attempting the take-off from Honolulu for Howland Island. None were injured but the plane had to be sent back to the factory for repairs.

Insurgent forces were reported that day to have smashed through the capital's defenses into northern Madrid.

John Dobberstein, town of Hortonia, was one of six farmers honored as an outstanding dairyman at the state convention of the Wisconsin Dairy-men's Association.

James Doyle, Oshkosh, University of Wisconsin senior class president, won first place in the state peace oratorical contest.

Miss Dorothy Oosterhous, Appleton, was elected to Phi Upsilon Omicron, home economics national honorary society, at Saint State College.

Dr. and Mrs. S. D. Green-wood, Neenah, made plans and booked passage to attend the coronation festivities in England in May.

Mrs. L. C. Sleeper was elected president of the Interdenominational Women's Missionary Board at a meeting at the home of Mrs. C. C. Nelson.

10 YEARS AGO

Saturday, March 22, 1937

The worst blizzard of the season accompanied Sen. Robert A. Taft into Appleton and through Waupaca County. In his speech here the senator lashed the Democratic administration's foreign policy for causing an "unnecessary" war.

Spring tornadoes and a flood struck four southern states on the Mississippi River and left 214 dead and more than 1,000 injured. Worst hit was Arkansas, where 115 were reported dead.

The City of Appleton sent a tentative application to the state highway commission for federal aid on the new John St. bridge over the Fox River.

Nancy Nelson was elected president of the 24-4-H Club just organized at Navarino.

New officers were seated at a meeting of Chapter B.P.E.O. Sisterhood. Chosen president for the year was Mrs. John Green, Mrs. William Van Buskirk, vice president, and Mrs. Franklin Osgood, treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Dostal of San Francisco spent some time in Appleton visiting with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Dostal, before leaving for Europe where they planned to meet Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Jennings in Rome.

Red's Robinson Now Ready for Leader's Role

Arrested Last Year,
National Loop's MVP
Has Come of Age

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Frank Robinson has come of age.

The National League's Most Valuable Player of 1961, the man who was most responsible for putting the Cincinnati Reds into the World Series, says he now realizes his responsibilities to his club and his teammates and is ready to assume the leader's role.

Almost overnight, Robinson has become the Reds' standard bearer, the big man, the one who sets the patterns, the fellow the others look to for help and advice. Robinson, who only a little over a year ago, ran afoul of the law when he was found guilty of carrying a concealed weapon, feels he is qualified to assume all the responsibilities of leadership.

"Up to last year," he says, "I didn't feel I could take on the responsibility of leadership. I didn't feel I was qualified to say things. But now I do. The fellows have confidence in me. The young guys come to me and ask me about hitting. Even the pitchers ask me my opinion on how to pitch to certain hitters."

"I could see the change last year. The boys looked for me to get the big hit. They sort of set things up for me, expecting me to deliver. They waited for me to set the pattern. I felt if I gave little extra, if I dogged it, they little extra, if I dogged it, they would dog it. It made me bear down a little harder. It made me a better ball player."

"Now I feel I have more of an obligation to the players and to the club. I feel I can't be satisfied with just a good year. Its got to be an outstanding year."

Robinson's achievements were many last year. He was at the top or close to it in a number of offensive categories. He slammed 37 home runs, drove in 124 runs, scored 117, stole 22 bases in 25 attempts and batted .323. Yet he isn't completely satisfied with those figures.

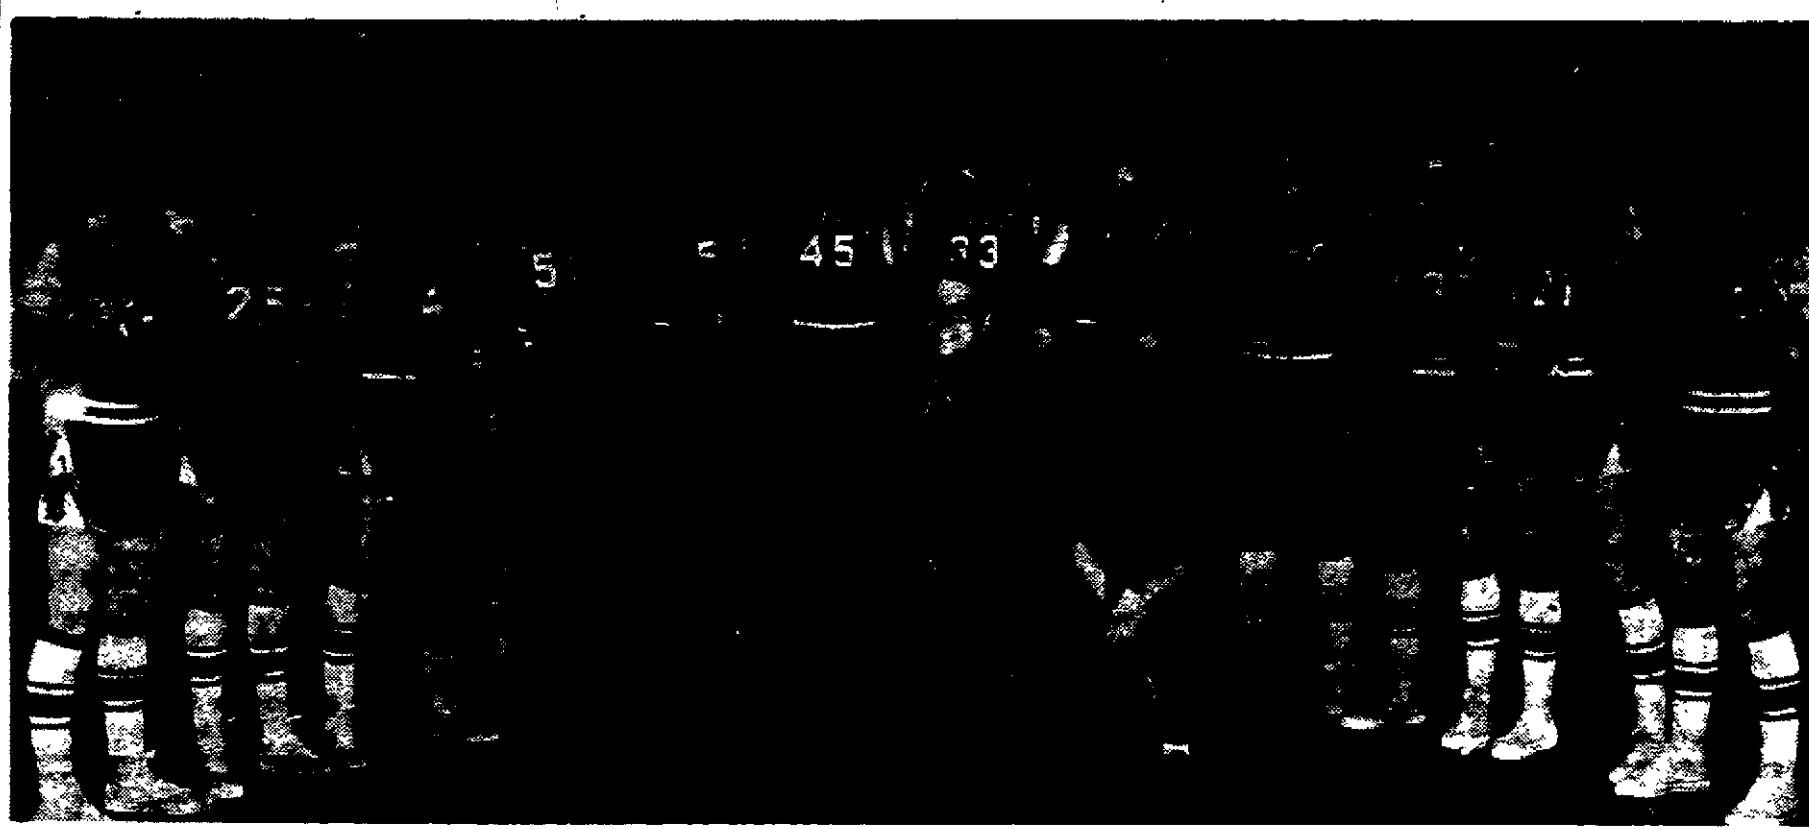

Robbie thinks he can raise his batting average this year, increase his home run and RBI total and steal more bases.

"I'm hoping for one year when everything goes right for me," he said. "I'd be interested myself to find out just what I'm capable of doing."

Stacy, A. J. Foyt Set Qualifying Pace in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP)—Some of the top performers of the stock car racing circuit, including national champion Ned Jarrett, were set today to make their qualifying runs for Sunday's 500-mile special race at the Atlanta International Raceway.

Nelson Stacy of Daytona Beach, Fla., 1961 winner of the Darlington 500, led 22 drivers Friday when he made their official four-lap qualifying runs. He set a pace of 137.579 miles per hour, and was clocked at 138.001 on his fastest lap in a 1962 Ford Mustang. The Indianapolis 500 winner, A. J. Foyt of Indianapolis, had the next best run. Steering a 1962 Pontiac, Foyt averaged 137.044 m.p.h., and his fastest lap was 137.299.

Stolen-Signal Charge Untrue, Says Thomson

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—To San Francisco Giants who were around more than a decade ago, the charge that Bobby Thomson's historic homer came on a stolen signal is unfounded.

Coach Whitney Lockman, base runner on second when Thomson clouted his pennant-winning homer off Brooklyn's Ralph Branca in 1951, said today:

"I couldn't even see Rube Walker's (Dodger catcher) signal to Branca on that homer."

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) —

At the ripe old baseball age of 36, Daie Long is enjoying his finest spring. In the first week of exhibition games, Washington's slugging first baseman hit three home runs and batted close to .600. Naturally, the average has sagged since that blazing start.

"I have a different attitude this year," Lon said. "Last year I felt I was hurt more than anybody else in the expansion draft.

I ended the season (1960) with the Yankees in the World Series and wound up with the new Washington team.

"After working 17 years to make the Yankee ball club, a fellow ought to be able to stay more than seven weeks."

Long was a sensational pinch hitter for the '60 Yanks. He joined the club Aug. 21 and hit .366 the rest of the way in 26 games. After tasting World Series money for the first time it was a shock to wind up with a club that was everybody's choice for the cellar.

"Missing out with the Yankees

the first year."

worked on me. Maybe it was a mental block. Fellows with the Yankees would tell me 'we're trying to get you'. Our own Washington club would tell me the same thing. Ed Doherty, our general manager, said 'The Yankees want you but they won't give up anything."

"I would play one day and bat cleanup. The next day I might be on the bench. I remember one doubleheader in Chicago when I hit two home runs, one in each game. The next day I was on the bench."

Long thought it over during the winter and decided to really bear down and get in shape to play every day.

"It is getting late for me and I want to get some good money," he said. "I came up late. I was a 25 before I played a big league game and 29 before I came to stay."

"Nowadays you see these kids come straight out of high school and get the big bonus. Some of them don't even know how to put on a uniform like a ball player.

It took me six years before I ever saw a big league training camp. Now the kids get a shot at the first year."

Long always will be remembered for his feat of hitting eight home runs for Pittsburgh in eight consecutive games in 1956, a major league record.

Drop in Attendance Factor In Braves' New TV Policy

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—John Milwaukee and state fans a de-

McHale, president and general served break. We think a small manager of the Milwaukee number of games will stimulate Braves, said Friday that dwindle baseball enthusiasm.

Until announcing the TV schedule Friday morning, The Braves had held out against television

since coming here from Boston in 1953 and were the last of the major clubs to give in to at least partial telecasting.

The Braves drew a home record of 2,215,404 fans in 1957—one of their championship years—but attracted only 1,101,441 to County

Stadium last season.

Owner Lou Perini has been against TV heretofore but agreed with McHale it now appears "the thing to do."

McHale said the season's telecasting "Doesn't necessarily mean there will be more games televised next year. It just means that television is wanted and that this is the time for it. Discreet use of TV will create fans and is something a lot of people will enjoy, including shut-ins and others who can't come out to ball games."

The network will consist of stations in Milwaukee, Madison,

Wausau and Green Bay and is expected to reach about 90 per cent of the television sets in Wisconsin.

Earl Gillespie and Blaine Walsh, who now handle radio broadcasts of the Braves, will also do the television work with commentary from Ernie Johnson, former Braves pitcher.

The first telecast will be the geles on Saturday night, April 14.

Miller Brewing Publishes Wisconsin Guide Book

Anyone who doubts Wisconsin's claim as a vacationland has only to look as far as the new "Guide to Fun" published this month by the Miller Brewing Co. of Milwaukee.

The new 100 page volume is a complete compendium of outdoor fun in the Badger state.

The "Guide to Fun" includes all of the major outdoor activities that Wisconsin is famous for—fishing, hunting, boating, golf, skiing, and camping.

Among other things, the directory includes information on 4,136 named lakes, 1,470 trout streams, all major ski hills, golf courses, hunting preserves, and county, state and federal parks.

The book divides the state by county and has a large "area recreation map" for each county—72 in all. In addition, there are 19 special purpose maps.

Each county map shows the location of lakes, golf courses, ski hills, public hunting and fishing spots, parks and historical sites.

A boon to fishermen is the added information published next to the maps about lakes in each county. These charts show which lakes have access, the precise acreage and what species of fish can be found.

Each county map also shows the location of airports, fish hatcheries, forest service lookout towers, forest ranger stations and historical sites.

Town, county, state and federal roads are shown, too.

Other maps in the directory include information for people with specialized sports interests. There's a separate, state-wide map showing national, state and county forests. There's another showing waterways and canoe trails. Yet another shows favorite bird haunts in the Badger state.

Other handy special purpose maps include details of the Kettle Moraine State Park, the Great River Road along the Mississippi River, the Lake Superior area, Green Bay Packer Stadium, Camp Randall Stadium at Madison, the Petenwell-Castle Rock area, the Horicon wild life area, the Milwaukee County Stadium, the County Zoo and State Fair interchange, the Road America race track, the Lake Michigan shoreline, the Lake Winnebago area and the Wolf River and Poygan area.

All of the maps are large, multi-colored and easy to read. Each "Guide to Fun" comes in a durable, weather-proofed container.

Copies of the new "Guide to Fun" can be obtained through retail outlets carrying Miller High Life beer. The brewery is making copies available for one dollar plus a trademark from any Miller take home package.

Other Meetings
The Fox Valley Chapter of the Hammond Organ Society will have its regular meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday evening. Four Hammond Associate teachers will each present a student at the meeting. In addition some youthful players will present some musical duets. They are Bardeen Van Handel, route 1, Kaukauna, and Mary Vander Puiten of route 4, Appleton. Mike Holstrom and Cheryl Rollo, both of Appleton.

Defer Action On College Building Site

State to Wait for Director to Meet La Crosse Officials

MADISON (AP) — The State Building Commission deferred action Friday on the site of the La Crosse State College physical education building.

Eugene McPhee, director of state colleges, was asked to meet with the La Crosse city council and mayor and make a report April 5.

In other action, the commission gave final approval to the $2 million student union building at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and heard more discussion of a state office building in the northwestern part of the state.

Firm Offer

The commission indicated that negotiations should produce a firm offer from La Crosse on the cost of the college building site. Mayor Milo Knutson told the group that the city-owned property was appraised at $100,000 and improvements would cost around $11,000.

McPhee said the state would pay $50,000 at the most, plus half the cost of improvements. The commission said it was not willing to pay $100,000 but several members said they did not want to make a "take it or leave it" offer.

Assemblyman Walter Terry, R-Baraboo, said the commission "was getting in the middle of a local political scrap over whether to give the land to the state college regents or sell it."

Continue Talks

Gov. Gaylord Nelson made the suggestion that McPhee continue negotiations with the city, saying, "Apparently the city-owned site is the best one for the building. The mayor and council came here in good faith and I think we should negotiate some more."

Bids for construction of the UWM student union are to be let next month and the project's completion date is September of 1963. Art Cirioli of Superior proposed that the state consider using its share of the cost of the project, which calls for adding 600 feet to the northwest - southeast runway, making it 5,000 feet long. The federal government has agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost. Wausau would pay 25 per cent and the state 25 per cent.

Donate Site

Alan Caraway of Hayward said his community would donate a site and construct a state office building to the state's specifications. He said Hayward was the "logical place" for an office building in that part of the state.

Nelson said the commission could give neither man an answer because such a building is not on the priority lists and no funds are available for it.

The commission approved an expenditure of $35,000 to continue work on the exterior of the state capitol and $20,000 to convert the basement in the University of Wisconsin - Milwaukee fine arts building to a temporary canteen.

Oshkosh Port Contracts Let; Wausau's Hopes Dim

Commission Puts Aside Wausau's New Strip Plan

The State Aeronautics Commission appears to have killed the idea of a runway extension at Wausau Municipal Airport to accommodate planes of the Convair class.

The state agency laid over Wausau's petition for funds for the project until its May meeting. This action was taken at the request of Arlyn West, Plover, a new commission member, who told other commissioners that Portage County wants time to consider a Central Wisconsin Area

Oconto Airport to Be Started in Fall

MADISON — Clearing and grading work for the authorized extension of the Oconto municipal airport at Oconto will probably start next fall, with actual construction of a new paved runway scheduled for the spring of 1963, the state department of aeronautics reports.

The department has approved the construction proposed by the City of Oconto of a paved north-south runway, with a paved apron and taxiway, at a total estimated cost of $64,000. The city will pay $22,000, the federal government $32,000 and the state $10,000.

Airport to serve Stevens Point, Marshfield, Wisconsin Rapids and other nearby communities.

The delay on Wausau's petition had the effect of killing the petition because federal funds for the project lapse April 30 unless the state takes action to provide matching funds.

The City of Wausau has raised its share of the cost of the project, which calls for adding 600 feet to the northwest - southeast runway, making it 5,000 feet long. The federal government has agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost. Wausau would pay 25 per cent and the state 25 per cent.

West indicated that the fate of Stevens Point has been improved in recent years and a Marshfield in the district for several years, might affect his decision on the proposal for expansion and improvement of the field at Wausau.

Wausau did not send a representative to the commission meeting. No one appeared against the petition.

Business interests and others in the Wisconsin Valley have talked held next month.

Fly-by-Night Businesses

Residents Warned of Shady Sale Promotions

Dist. Atty. Nick F. Schaefer and Sheriff Robert Heintz today issued a warning to Fox Cities area residents about questionable sales campaigns being conducted in the area.

The two officials said they have been receiving numerous complaints from victims of the sales.

"In checking these complaints we've found the firms involved are of the itinerant or fly-by-night type. However, in the majority of cases the business operation has been carefully planned so that there is no violation of the Wisconsin Criminal Laws."

"Frequently the transaction begins with telephone calls or door to door visit offering something free, a gift or a prize or a special bonus. People are promised that the product will pay for itself through sales made by referral to their relatives and friends," the sheriff and district attorney said.

Cost Skyrockets

"Commonly the cost of the product skyrockets through finance and carrying charges that are not clearly understood by the purchaser."

Heintz and Schaefer suggested that before signing papers or making a down payment to purchase any product, the citizen should satisfy himself about the following points:

Make sure that the firm you are dealing with is a reliable well established firm.

Sign no papers that you do not

VFW Auxiliary At Kaukauna to Plan Ceremony

KAUKAUNA — Plans will be discussed for joint installation ceremonies with the VFW unit at a meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary at 8 p.m. April 2 at the VFW clubrooms.

Joint installation, tentatively set for April 28. There will be no meeting Monday as erroneously stated in a Post-Crescent story earlier this week.

Vocational Schools To Combine Classes For Girl Students

AVS, MVS Coordinate Programs; Substantial Savings Expected

Appleton and Menasha vocational schools will combine their full-year, Bertram said. The number of time programs for compulsory age fluctuates, he noted, dropping from six to five, and now at seven.

Classes will be held one semester at each school, with students from the other city transported.

The decision to combine the programs was made because of the steadily decreasing number of students in them, resulting in high instructional costs. Combining them will result in substantial savings, estimated at $6,000 to $7,000 a year by the two directors.

Savings Estimated

By combining them, about half the cost and less transportation expenses, will be saved, Bertram said. He said the cost of the program at AVS is about $8,550 a year. Estimating transportation costs at $378, he said "we hope to reach a savings through consolidation of something approaching $4,000."

Sherman, MVS director, estimated that the school's savings would be from $2,600 to $3,000.

Compulsory age students are those between 14 and 18 who attend vocational school rather than high school with approval of their parents. Those over 16 may work and attend school one day a week while those under 16 and those who do not work must attend school full-time.

Appleton Vocational School had 12 girls in the full-time program about a large central airport for some time, without results thus far.

Other Port Developments

The Portage county airport at Stevens Point has been improved in recent years and a Marshfield in the district for several years, might affect his decision on the proposal for expansion and improvement of the field at Wausau.

Wausau did not send a representative to the commission meeting. No one appeared against the petition.

Instrument Landings to Be Possible

MADISON — Construction contract awards for the extension of a runway at the Winnebago County Airport at Oshkosh to elevate it to instrument flight standards were announced Friday afternoon by the State Department of Aeronautics.

Thomas K. Jordan, director of the state department, said the contract for paving of the runway extension, the construction of a parallel taxiway, and an extension of the airplane parking apron at the terminal building was awarded to the Rasmussen Construction Co. of Oshkosh on a bid of $170,000.

Green Bay Firm Wins

Grading work for the improvements will be done by Wilson and Shiger of Beloit, on a bid of $90,174, and the lighting installation contract went to Anderson Electric Service Co., Green Bay, for $7,513.

The project calls for the extension of the east-west airport runway a distance of 2,400 feet, to a total of 5,200 feet.

Jordan said construction work will begin as soon as weather conditions permit this spring.

The state agency Friday received clearance on the contract awards from the Federal Aviation Agency in Washington, which had held them for the last 45 days. The contracts will also be executed by Winnebago County officials.

New London Graduation to Be Different

NEW LONDON — The traditional customs of graduation will be cast aside at Washington High School this year. Raymond Langley, principal, said there will be no valedictorian or salutatorian this year.

The president of the class, Martin Marasch, will be master of ceremonies.

There will be no outside speaker in another departure from school tradition. Speakers will be selected from the honor students of the senior class.

Paper caps and gowns also will replace the rented gown of past years. The caps and gowns will be purchased by the students and taken home as reminders of their graduation.

Sponsors are the Larsen Co-op, American Legion Post, Dr. D. H. McDonald, Winneconne Businessmen's Association and Winneconne-Pogan Fire Department.

Capt. Harry Salzman, 931 W. Packard St., today was named acting Appleton police chief, effective March 31 until further notice. He replaces Chief Walter Hendricks, whose resignation is effective that date. The Appleton Police and Fire Commission now is accepting applications for full-time appointment for both the police and fire chief positions.

Planners, Politicians Must Work Together, Nelson Says

Governor Urges Joint Effort To Curb Metropolitan Sprawl

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KENOSHA — Planners and politicians must work together if Wisconsin's rapidly expanding metropolitan areas are to be spared the urban sprawl so tragically afflicting the Los Angeles basin, Gov. Gaylord Nelson declared here Friday night.

Addressing the fifth annual state planning conference, sponsored by the Association of Wisconsin Planners and the Wisconsin Section, American Institute of Planners, Nelson termed cooperation between professional planners and public officials "absolutely crucial."

"The tragic thing about professional groups of planners," Nelson said, "is that they don't want to have anything to do with politics. The fact of the matter is that you don't implement the plans unless you do so through political planning."

A major portion of the planning to be done in America in the next decade must be done by local, state and federal governments, he said.

Legion Women Plan Public Card Party

LITTLE CHUTE — The third president Leo Bodine of Menominee Enterprises, Inc., said Friday that land will be leased to outsiders and leased or sold to aid the tribe in planning their economic future.

Menominee County is cooperating with Shawano, Waupaca and Outagamie counties in developing a youth camp which will be available to four-H clubs and similar organizations.

The Indians intend ultimately to build up about 6,000 acres of the nearly 200,000 in the county with year around recreational facilities. Sale or lease agreements this year will include a provision that construction of improvements must start during 1962.

The project was outlined by Neelan Engineers of Somerset, Pa., which has been retained to aid the tribe in planning their economic future.

Firm Tells New Vacation Arrangements

NEENAH—Hardwood Products Corp. officials today announced a change in the usual production shutdown plans and vacation arrangements.

In previous years production was stopped during the Fourth of July week for taking inventories and maintenance. This shutdown in a busy season caused many problems of supply to customers, the company said.

Last year the inventory period was changed from a fiscal year to a calendar year and the inventory was taken during the period between Christmas and New Year's day.

This year there will be no production scheduled on May 31 and June 1 so that employees will have a long Memorial Day weekend. Necessary inspection of boilers and power equipment and maintenance problems will be handled over the holiday.

Vacations now may be scheduled at any time mutually agreeable to company and employees and must be for a full week's duration, the company announced.

Burns Prove Fatal to Sturgeon Bay Woman

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Mrs. Lawrence Burke, 70, of Sturgeon Bay died at St. Mary's Hospital Friday of burns suffered in her home March 14.

Her husband had been filling a hard warmer with lighter fluid before going fishing. He had left the room to get a rag to wipe up the spilled fluid when Mrs. Burke entered and fell. The liquid was ignited by her cigaret and the flames spread to her clothing.

The test is being administered by James L'Heureux, mathematics instructor at the Fox Valley and University of Wisconsin Center.

Menominees to Lease 600 Sites for Recreational Use

KESHENA (AP)—The Menominee Indians plan to offer leases of about 600 sites for summer cottages or other recreational use in the lake area of southeastern Menominee County and along the Wolf River.

George Kenote, assistant to the president of Menominee Enterprises, Inc., said Friday that land will be leased to outsiders and leased or sold to aid the tribe in planning their economic future.

OSC Offers Summer Class on Foreign Language Teaching

OSHKOSH — The trend to teach foreign languages in elementary schools will receive added impetus from Oshkosh State College this summer when it offers a special French workshop designed for elementary school teachers who are teaching or might teach the language in their schools.

The workshop carries six hours of credit and will meet three hours each school day during the college's 8-week summer session, according to L. O. Tetzlaff, dean of the session.

Conducting the workshop will be Dr. Lester Beberfall. He said that each three-hour day would include instruction in the language, demonstrations with children who have never before been exposed to the language, and a discussion period to evaluate the experiences of the day.

Began in 1960
Dr. Beberfall initiated a French program in the OSC Campus Laboratory School in 1960. The program started with all children enrolled in the sixth grade, and is continuing with those children who showed an aptitude for the language during the first year. When these children leave the Campus School, they will have the equivalent of two years of high school French.

New Tanks to be Tested

Excavation Ordered at Site of Gasoline Leak

A representative of the state industrial commission has ordered excavation of the area around two leaky underground gasoline storage tanks excavated.

John McHale, of the fire prevention bureau of the industrial commission, ordered the excavation to determine if sewer connections to the foundation of an old house in which the tanks were buried have been plugged.

About 5,000 gallons of gasoline escaped from two storage tanks at a service station under construction at Lawrence Street and Memorial Drive.

The gasoline found its way into the sewer system that serves part of downtown Appleton, filling the sewers with vapors and creating an explosion and fire commission, ordered the excavation to determine if sewer connections to the foundation of an old house in which the tanks were buried have been plugged.

Appleton firemen have been flushing the sewers to clear them of pockets of gasoline vapors. All three tanks buried at the station will be removed.

Acting Fire Chief Roland Kuehn said firemen have set up barricades around the station and are throwing sand onto gasoline that has seeped into the hole left by the tanks when they were removed.

Kuehn said he was informed the tanks are the third and fourth ones manufactured by the same company that have broken.

McHale told Kuehn he will stop installation of new tanks until they are tested at the site. The tanks supposedly are X-rayed for flaws at the factory.

British Dog Sees Again After Corneal Graft

LONDON (AP) — Simon, the blind man's guide dog, got slower and slower until his owner, John Thomas, realized that Simon himself had gone blind.

Now Simon can see again after a corneal graft—the first in Britain on both eyes, human or canine.

The dog now is leading his 26-year-old master about with the same fidelity and sureness as before the "Objectives of Elementary School Foreign Language Teaching" during the Northeastern Education Association convention which will meet in Oshkosh on Friday, April 13.

He also thanked the owners of two mongrels who were put away to give Simon new eyes. Thomas has been blind since he was 15.

Human Rights State Problem, Reynolds Says

'Amend Wisconsin Constitution for Cabinet' He Urges

EAU CLAIRE (AP)—The matter of human rights is one of the most serious problems in Wisconsin, Atty. Gen. John Reynolds said Friday night in a keynote address to the Wisconsin Young Democrats convention.

Reynolds, seeking his party's nomination for governor, also said the Wisconsin constitution should be amended to provide for a cabinet form of government and four year terms for the governor and lieutenant governor.

He took digs at the Republicans and while favoring urban redevelopment, legislative reapportionment of the state and greater educational opportunities, especially adequate college facilities for an expanding high school population.

Coming From South

On human rights, Reynolds said, "Today the Negro is coming to Wisconsin from the South. He, too, seeks a home. His problem is much greater than any other group. His skin is black and he is therefore a target for slurs and bigotry. Our growing number of Negro citizens presents the toughest test in Wisconsin history for our belief in equal opportunity and freedom for all."

He called the Republicans a "miserable excuse" for an opposition party and said, "The John Birch Society and Robert Welch dominate the financial side of the Republican party in Wisconsin through Mr. William Grede of Milwaukee and Cola Parker of Neenah." He said the two are "national officers" of the society founded by Welch.

The convention ends Sunday. Gov. Gaylord Nelson is scheduled to speak at tonight's banquet.

Parochial High Students to Get Driver Training

AVS to Give Entire Course to Run From May 7 to June 26

The Appleton Vocational and Adult School has arranged a drivers education program for students of Fox Valley Lutheran and Xavier high schools. Neither parochial high school has a driver education course now.

The course will consist of 30 hours of classroom instruction, given four hours a week from May 7 to June 26, six hours of observation with a driving instructor and a minimum of six hours of actual personal driving instruction. All of the instructors will be at the vocational school.

Appleton High School students receive the classroom instruction at the high school and the observation and driving instruction at the vocational school. State statute prohibits the vocational school from having a similar "split" teaching agreement with parochial schools. Parochial school students have taken the summer driver education course at the vocational school.

Expect Large Enrollment

Vocational School director Carl Bertram estimated that there will be from 80 to 100 students in the program this year and more in ensuing years.

Registration is limited to those 16 and over, and is daily at the vocational school. The programs fully insured. Students successfully completing the course are entitled to a 10 per cent premium reduction of car insurance.

The summer driver education program for adults also includes six hours of driving instruction but only 14 classroom hours, and no observation is required. In 1961 about 125 adults took the course, Bertram said.

Precipitation Not Expected This Weekend

Despite Friday's weather forecast, weatherman Ralph Dorn says no precipitation is expected in the Fox Cities this weekend.

There is a chance of rain in extreme southern portions of the state tonight, but only a chance. Sunny skies will predominate in the area today and Sunday. Clouds may block the sun at times, but complete clouding over isn't expected.

Temperatures will remain in the mid-40s during the day and fall to the mid-20s at night. Heavy ground fog on highways was reported in sections of Winnebago County early today by the State Traffic Patrol.

Spring Floods

Damaging spring floods in the nation's midsection are a possibility, but apparently not a serious threat unless the next few weeks bring heavy rains or a sudden warmup.

That's the consensus of U.S. Weather Bureau observers who are keeping an eye on the heavy snow cover in the upper Missouri and Mississippi River basins.

The Weather Bureau River Center in Kansas City said melting upstream on the Missouri was not expected to raise the river sharply unless heavy rains occur.

So far, melting conditions have been ideal over most of the area with temperatures rising into the 40s during the day and dropping to the low 30s at night.

The ability of huge storage reservoirs to hold back part of the runoff appears to be a major factor in the flood outlook.

Power dams in northern Minnesota and Wisconsin are at low levels due to dry weather last fall and are expected to hold a large amount of runoff that otherwise would flow into the Mississippi.

Set Release Date for 32nd, O'Konski Urges

BY RICHARD P. POWERS
WASHINGTON, AP.—Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski, R-Wis., says the big question bothering the men of Wisconsin's 32nd National Guard Division can be stated simply, what will be the date of their release from active duty?

O'Konski said he has received about 2,000 letters from members of the 32nd division in training at Ft. Lewis, Wash., members of their families and Wisconsin men called to active duty and serving in other areas.

The problem, says this House member, is being called up and they are doing their duty. O'Konski said he has been told that they have more duty and they want to know a positive date for their release so that can plan a family.

The man who called to active duty, he said, has been told that they are doing their duty.

Cooperate On Defense

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The national tournament at Lexington, Ky., scheduled for the end of March, reminds me of a hand played in this tournament last year when the locale was Denver. The prize players had two chances to separate themselves from the card-pushers.

At many tables West opened a spade or a club and declarer had no trouble. South had to develop one club suit in dummy. Then he could draw trumps, giving up one club, one trump, and one diamond.

At a few tables West began the most promising defense by opening the ace of hearts and continuing with a heart. "Nobody led diamonds from the West hand, although this would have worked well as the cards lay."

The good declarers won the second trick in dummy with the king of hearts and immediately returned a low club from dummy.

Second Chance

This gave the defenders their second chance to show what they were made of. It was a poor display in most cases.

East usually played low, allowing South to duck the first club trick to West. Since West couldn't lead another trump, the defense collapsed. South could run a club in dummy, and the rest was easy. In a few cases East put up the bid of clubs when that suit was led from dummy. If South played the club, East would win the trick and lead a third round of trumps. If South won and returned a club, East would win with the queen of clubs to lead a third trump.

It was not a question of making sure to win a club trick in the hand that could lead a third trump but even some of the most experienced players in the country flubbed it.

Kennedy Thinks Aged Will be Future Issue

BY VICTOR RIESEL

NEW YORK—At high noon May 20, caravans of cars will converge on Madison Square Garden and the President of the U.S. These autos will carry the aged and the aged will be a "future issue."

The man who called into action the aged was the aged. There had been speculation that they might be released June 30, however, instead of serving the full year.

Excerpts From Letters
Excerpts of letters received from members of the 32nd division and their families include:

"I wish to express the strong feeling of myself and everyone else that there is no justification for keeping us any longer on active duty than June 30. Soon appropriate funds will be discussed to keep us here until August. Seriously we feel this is such a waste. Now that we have reached combat readiness and have filled the gap for the Berlin crisis, it would be a real waste financially, economically and our lives to keep us here any longer than June."

"I still have my family in Superior because of the doubt that we will be on active duty for the full year. Also the financial burden is coming to the point where it will take me years to overcome. If some date could be given of our release I could, and many others could, start looking forward to the future and for the welfare of our families."

Many Contradictions
"We've read and been told contradiction upon contradiction, regarding our release date. Can anything be done to relieve this confusion?"

"I am not a chronic complainer. As a matter of fact I've never written a congress-man before, but Mr. O'Konski, what's right is right. Well, we're ready to go, and we've sacrificed, not asked what our country could do for us, but what we could do for our country. Trained, gotten combat ready, and left our jobs, homes and loved ones. O.K., fine, someone had to do it and we did it. Now what? How long is the administration going to let us sit out here?"

Stir the Land
The President and his inner sanctum group feel strongly that nothing will stir the land as much as this medical aid campaign. For some time now Mr. Kennedy has had one of his most energetic aides, Richard Maguire, coordinating the drive for passage of the hospitalization-nursing home-domiciliary act to the aged bill.

Maguire, who is expected to replace Matthew McCloskey as treasurer of the Democratic National Committee when the latter turns ambassador, has been quietly "working" the country. Most recently Maguire met with Democratic chairmen of the New York and other states.

And this campaign does take considerable coordinating. One of the experts in the field, Zalmen J. Lichtenstein, executive director of the Golden Ring Council of Senior Citizens, estimates that there are some 500 active groups. At the moment, Lichtenstein believes there are a million or more activists—age 65 to 85 ringing doorbells, telephoning, selling tickets to mass rallies such as the Madison Square Garden concentration.

He's Willing
And this gentleman should know. He has been visiting the White House two and three times monthly on the campaign. At first he talked to presidential assistant Richard Goodwin. Then Maguire was assigned.

There has been several who talked to President Kennedy specifically about all this within the past few weeks. They've come away with the impression that he is willing to stump the country—clear across from New York to Chicago to Los Angeles for other mass medical aid rallies. There is no doubt that the crowds will be there. The appeal is being made not only to the majority of our 17,000,000 elder citizens over 65—but to their children and grandchildren.

It has all been deeply researched and polled and there is vast interest indeed amongst a bloc of our citizenry which could easily total some 50,000,000.

New Headquarters
An effort to reach them already is being made by the new central Washington headquarters called "The National Council of Senior Citizens for Health Care Through Social Security." Until May 20th rallies were planned—from Los Angeles to Boston—I was told—the Council affiliates contended themselves with proving quietly that though life may be again at forty, it's mighty vibrant at 80, too.

There is no lacking of support. In addition to New York and Washington groups there are such units as the Alabama League of Senior Citizens and the California Golden Ring Council Clubs. Such clubs operate in Ohio, Illinois and Florida, they tell me.

And there is a powerful assist from big unions. There is, for example, the Washington office of the United Steelworkers. Assigned to it is one James C. O'Brien who coordinates the activities of thousands of steel retirees with those of the Council clubs. In Detroit, the auto workers have special programs. So have the garment workers here.

In the past the elder folk marched by themselves—they marched on Washington, on Union Square here on Hyde Park.

But today, with the aid of the White House and some unions and regional groups, the elderly are calling on children and grandchildren to make this campaign a national three-generation drive.

Another Form
And there's another use of the word in a slightly different form—clinical. In research many new and valuable ideas originate in laboratories. When there has been sufficient study and testing, the final and necessary step is clinical testing, which means testing the methods or drugs or treatments with patients.

No, the word clinic isn't a title. I think it's indiscriminate use by many small medical offices is wrong.

Dear Dr. Moirer: My daughter, six months old, has what appears to be a blood blister, but red, behind her ear. My doctor said it was a birthmark, but it wouldn't appear at birth—MRS. W. R.

A birthmark is a mark of some sort which occurs because of some small quirk of nature rather than being caused by some accident or injury. It's not a good term really, because it has nothing to do with the process of being born. Such marks can and often do become visible only some time after birth. If your doctor isn't worried, you shouldn't be either. If it is disgusting, ask his advice about having a skin specialist decide whether, either sooner or later, the mark should be removed for the sake of appearance.

Dear Dr. Moirer: Is it true that a woman becomes pregnant only at a certain time of the month? Could you explain it, please?—MRS. H.

Yes, since ovulation—the appearance of an ovum, or egg, from the ovaries—occurs only once a month as a rule. This happens usually between the 12th to 16th day from the beginning of the last period, but it often varies a day or more beyond that approximate time. Fertilization of the ovum usually must occur within about 48 hours of the time of ovulation.

most of the beauty of this wonderful country we're living in. The State Department of Resource Development is now preparing a comprehensive plan for Wisconsin. The plan is the first of its kind to be prepared for any state in the union.

"I think we lead the nation in planning, but that's a tragic commentary on the state of our nation."

West Coast's Mess
Anyone who wishes to see what America is going to look like without a plan need only go to the West Coast, he said, terminating the San Francisco Bay area "a magnificent example of our great capacity to improperly utilize our assets."

"Again, it's a tragic comment on how far behind we are in this country that this kind of a problem — this lack in the day — should be attracting attention all over the nation."

"The two greatest problems facing the nation today are conservation of our resources and education of our youth," he declared.

Problems Not Seen
"We have recognized education well, but no place in the country has the public recognized the need for stable, steady source of funds for the development of our national resources."

Clark Warns of Dangers of Thin Ice, Hitchhiking
MENASHA — A warning to youngsters to stay away from the shores of the lakes and canal because of the thin ice was issued today by Police Chief Peter P. Clark. He said children may think the ice is strong enough to hold them but they could break through.

He asked parents to warn children about such dangers and also about the danger of hitchhiking. Complaints have been received about hitchhikers walking along the streets.

Not only is there a safety hazard in their being on the streets where they might be struck by a car, but there also is the possibility the person giving them a ride might not take the hitchhiker to the place where he wants to go, Clark said.
